

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

MARKETS | U.S. MARKETS

Nasdaq Futures Rise After Tech Selloff

Amazon.com and Snap shares leap in premarket trading after posting profits

Stock-index futures

...Since the start of this year, the Nasdaq Composite has lost more than 11%, while the S&P 500 has slid 6.1%. The Dow, in comparison, has fallen 3.4%.

The market volatility could continue until the Fed implements its first interest-rate increase and investors get used to the idea of rising rates, said Peter Andersen, founder of Massachusetts-based investment firm Andersen Capital Management.

“The fact that everything is sold off wholesale is really, in my opinion, a buying opportunity,” Mr. Andersen said. “Every investor is so spooked now, and nobody really has a compass to figure out where exactly we are in this cycle.”